

2 TRAINS IN WRECK SOUTH OF ESOPUS

North Bound Freight Crashes Into Rear of Another In Fog Early Sunday—Traffic Tied Up 12 Hours—Caboose and Three Cars Burned.

A rear end collision between north-bound freight trains on the West Shore railroad about eight hundred feet south of the Esopus station tied up traffic on the West Shore railroad from 3:30 o'clock Sunday morning, when the collision occurred, until after three o'clock in the afternoon, when the traffic was resumed on one track.

Nobody was injured in the wreck, but the locomotive which ran into the rear of the forward freight train was derailed and badly damaged and the caboose and three freight cars on the train ahead were burned with their contents.

The accident was due to the heavy fog which settled over the entire river section early in the day. At Esopus there had been a heavy blanket of fog which settled down early in the afternoon, and which at times completely shut out everything from view. Toward night the density of the fog increased, and by midnight it was practically impossible to see the signal lights a short distance from the station. Later the fog became still more dense. For the purpose of signalling the passenger trains at various stations south of West Point earlier in the evening, red fire cones were burned along the tracks, and both passenger and freight trains proceeded at a slow rate.

When the first of the north-bound freight trains stopped at Esopus shortly after three o'clock, the usual signals were used to warn other trains but the fog was too thick for them to be seen by the engineer or fireman in charge of the second train which crashed into the caboose of the standing train with force sufficient to derail the locomotive of the second train, and the caboose and three rear cars of the train that was motionless.

The pony truck of the locomotive was thrown from the rails, and the driving wheels also left the track. The front of the locomotive was smashed but the boiler remained intact and both the engineer and fireman were able to climb down from the engine-cab unharmed. Nobody was in the caboose of the train ahead.

Three Cars Filled With Paper.

The three rear cars of the train at the station were filled with paper and paper products, and the contents of the three cars were strewn over both tracks. The wreckage caught fire from the lamps in the caboose and the remaining part of the train was hauled ahead to prevent the other cars from catching fire. The flames burned fiercely and their reflection made the fog take on the appearance of a furnace. The flames occasionally lifted their shafts high above the fog blanket. The heat from the burning cars was so intense that the rails were bent and twisted and in some places the ties were burned through. The iron framework of the wrecked cars was also bent out of shape by the heat.

Kingston Wreckers at Scene.

Later the wrecking train from Kingston was sent to Esopus and every man available for work was called to duty. The wreckers were unable to do anything at the scene of the wreck for some time because the heat was too intense to allow them to approach within working distance. When the flames had cooled sufficiently, earth was thrown on the embers, but embers and ashes remained so much heat that it was some time before they could be shoveled from the track and thrown down the embankment at the top of which the wreck had occurred. New rails were laid and connections were made between the south and north bound tracks, and about five hours after the wreck took place, trains which had been piling up on both sides of the wreck were sent through on the south bound track. It was expected that before tonight all the wreckage would have been cleared, and both tracks put in condition for through traffic.

Automobile Breaks Hydrant.

Shortly after midnight Saturday an automobile crashed into the fire hydrant on Albany avenue near the Ulster & Delaware railroad bridge, snapping the hydrant in two. In a few minutes the street was flooded with water and a hurry call was sent to the water department. It is thought the driver of the automobile became confused by the heavy fog and lost his bearings. The number on the machine was 55,569, and is said to be owned by Theodore St. Peter of Brown's Station. The machine must have been traveling at a great rate of speed to collide with sufficient force to snap one of the fire hydrants off.

WAR AND FAMINE CRUSHES SERBIA

All Except 4,000 Square Miles in Possession of Teuton Forces—Black Ruin Covers Land—Typhus Breaks Out.

By Telegram to The Freeman. London, Nov. 29.—After a 51-day campaign by the Germans, Austro-Hungarians and Bulgarians, Serbia has been crushed. Of the 34,000 square miles making up King Peter's kingdom, less than 4,000 square miles remain in the possession of the Serbs and Anglo-French troops. The greater part of the Serbian soldiers who were not killed or captured have fled into Montenegro, where they have joined the Montenegrins.

Advices received today indicated that the attempts of the Anglo-French troops to save Monastir have failed. Rome reports that Monastir was evacuated on Saturday by the entire troops and occupied yesterday by the Bulgars. An Athens dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company, however, failed to say that Monastir has been captured by the German allies. This telegram said: "Eight thousand Serbians outside Monastir are offering last resistance without any hope of success."

Official announcement by Berlin that "the great operations of Germany in the Balkans have been brought to a close," was evidently intended to have strong political effect in Bucharest and Athens as showing that Field Marshal von Mackensen's victorious forces are now free for action elsewhere.

Conditions in Serbia cannot be compared with those in Belgium. Serbia is a corpse. Black ruin covers the land. The population is going fast before the combined forces of war, cold and famine. Typhus has broken out in the western mountain districts.

TWO DIVORCE SUITS HEARD SATURDAY

Testimony in Behalf of William H. Bird Indicates Wife is Living With Another Man in This City—Negro Woman Reported to Have Two Husbands.

Before Supreme Court Justice G. D. Hasbrouck in his chambers in the court house on Saturday, testimony was taken in the suit for divorce instituted by William H. Bird against Gussie Bird. Siebert Barley was named as co-respondent. The action was undefended and the court reserved decision.

The Birds were married in Hurley, Ulster county, on April 17, 1891, and have six children, Viola, Almyra, Gladys, Florence, Floyd and Esther, who range in age from 9 to 18 years.

It is alleged that Mrs. Bird, who did not appear in court, left her husband eight years ago. Testimony by the plaintiff, by Detective William Cohen, by John H. Harrison, superintendent of the Kingston city water works, and by John L. Kinkade indicated that the woman is living with Barley in the George L. Kinkade property at 29 North Front street. The six children are with her.

The plaintiff was represented by Attorney Roscoe Irwin with William H. Grogan of counsel. The defendant had as her attorney, Edward McKiernan, who was in court but took no part in the hearing.

Bird is at present employed at the harness trade in Westchester county.

Negro Woman Doubly Married.

A hearing also was held Saturday in the divorce action of James Williams against Julia Williams, colored. The plaintiff is employed on the Wiltzie farm in the town of Marlborough and the woman for some time was employed as a cook by Mrs. Finney in Wappingers Falls. It was on her alleged conduct while in the Dutchess county village that the suit was based, Abram Spotwood having been named as co-respondent. Malachi Lewis swore to indiscretions of the woman in August, 1913. It was said that after Mrs. Williams left Wappingers Falls she went to New York city. The next heard of her was in Virginia, where she is said to have got married again the present month.

CANADA SEIZES WHEAT SUPPLY

All High Grade Grain in Elevators West of Fort William Seized by Government—Severe Blow to Canadian Speculators.

By Telegram to The Freeman. Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 29.—All bids for wheat standing today were suspended by order of Chairman McGill of the Canadian grain commission, following the action of the government in seizing all high grade wheat in elevators between Fort Williams, on Lake Superior and the Atlantic coast.

The government order, which was issued under the special war act, caused the seizure of about 20,000,000 bushels of wheat, much of which is the property of American grain dealers. It was not known here whether the seizure would extend to the grain held by farmers in western provinces and in elevators west of Fort Williams.

The government's action was a severe blow to speculators who had figured on reaping large war profits on Canada's monster wheat crop. Milling men said today the action would not affect their business and W. E. Milner, president of the Winnipeg exchange said he did not think the seizure would affect the market to any great extent. The closing price of Saturday, $1.04, will be paid by the government for the wheat it seized.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—Opening wheat prices in Chicago were 2 1/2 cents higher than on Saturday's close, on account of the action of the Canadian government in commandeering all the wheat in elevators between Fort Williams, on Lake Superior and the Atlantic coast.

The sharp advance in wheat prices caused a bulge in corn of 1/2 cent and an advance of 1/4 cent in oats. Pandemonium reigned in the wheat pit as soon as the opening gong was sounded. Traders wildly shouted their bids and first trades were made at a wide range of prices. The pit was in the worst sort of turmoil.

Bids on wheat for December delivery ranged from 1.05 to 1.06 at the outset. In a few seconds the price broke to 1.04 1/2 and then as quickly rallied to 1.05.

Wheat for May delivery, which closed on Saturday at 1.06 1/2, sold at the opening today at 1.08 1/2 to 1.07.

The wide range of prices showed that the traders were bidding blindly. No one knew what effect the action of the Canadian government was going to have. The whole pit was "up in the air."

Fifteen minutes after the opening prices for December were close to 1.05 1/2 and for May 1.07 1/2. Early buying was mostly by dealers who had been caught short. Many local traders who believed the action of the Canadian government was a bearish factor, sold freely at the advanced prices.

Arthur C. Connelly, a lawyer of Wall street, had a trip of more than 160 miles on Saturday for nothing.

He has been in New York city engaged on legal business and was called back Saturday to sell as referee two parcels of property in Rosendale. The sale was to have taken place at the front door of the court house at noon. Only two or three prospective buyers were in attendance and on the request of V. B. Van Wageningen, attorney for the plaintiffs in the proceedings the sale was postponed until Wednesday, December 3.

Attorney Connelly had to return at once to New York. The property is to be sold under a judgment obtained by Abram S. Schoonmaker and Charles S. Wood as executors and trustees under the last will of Simon Schoonmaker against Jacob A. Wood as executor and trustee under the will of Simon Schoonmaker and others.

RESERVED SEATS AT BUTTERFLY BALL

The managers of the Butterfly Ball have been in receipt of a constant stream of inquiries regarding the question of reserved seats at the armory on December 9. The demand finally culminated in the forming of a committee of citizens who proposed to take charge of and sell 75 or 80 extra seats at $1.00 apiece over and above the admission price. As the ball is given for the worthy cause of the Kingston City Hospital and for the prime object of raising money, the management could hardly refuse this proposition. These chairs will be on sale at Burgevin's shop where the chart may be seen and will be sold only to people already holding regular admission tickets. It must be understood that these chairs will in no way lessen the number of seats already planned for people holding admission tickets only, but will furnish additional accommodations at an additional price.

To the list of young ladies dancing in the butterfly ball which The Freeman published on Saturday, the following names should be added: Miss Olive Clearwater, Miss Margaret Riskey, Miss Helen Diamond, Miss Winifred Fuller.

WEDDING UNDER GREAT DIFFICULTIES

Although Bride's Mother Objected and Street Crowd Took a Great Interest, Love Found a Way, With the Aid of a Taxicab.

Leonard T. Davis of No. 21 Staples street and Miss Catherine Donnelly of No. 7 Hanratty street were united in marriage at an early hour on Sunday morning by the Rev. George E. Barber. Behind that simple announcement is found the story of an extremely tempestuous evening in which the local police, the bride's mother and a few other characters held the stage and which finally culminated in a wild automobile ride pursued by the girl's mother and ended with the sweet chimes of the wedding bells.

The groom is the popular barber employed at Thomas's barber shop at No. 262 Broadway, while the bride was employed as cashier at S. Baker & Son's store on the Strand. The young couple were expecting to be united in marriage on Sunday but the wedding was hastened as will be told later on. The young lady when the store closed Saturday evening walked to her home. Shortly after 11 o'clock she telephoned to the barber shop and informed her fiancé that her mother had ordered her out of the house. The young man promptly informed her to wait for him and he would be down.

He went down and the couple left, the groom expecting to take his bride-to-be over to his sister's home and let her spend the night there. However, they did not get a short distance when the bride's mother took up the pursuit of her daughter. At the corner of Broadway and East Chester street the mother sent a frantic telephone appeal to police headquarters to send an officer as her daughter was being kidnapped. In a jiffy Policeman Daun was sent hastening to the scene.

Just about this time the basketball game at the armory was concluded and soon a large crowd of basketball fans on their way home stopped to enjoy the little drama from real life that was being staged at the car barn. When Policeman Daun arrived he found that the bride-to-be was over twenty years of age and after talking the matter over he informed the mother that he could do nothing. To get rid of the crowd that had gathered Mr. Davis and Miss Donnelly walked on up Broadway but the mother still refused to be shaken and seeing that it was impossible to reach his sister's home without creating still more of a disturbance the young couple sought refuge in the barber shop where the groom is employed.

While inside Mr. Davis telephoned for a taxicab and they quietly remained in doors while the mother took up her station on the corner of Broadway and Fourth avenue and kept a watchful eye on the entrance to the barber shop.

The taxi driver, however, had received his instruction and drove his machine through into the back street and the couple made their exit through the back door and entered the taxi while the mother, not yet aware of their escape from the shop, still remained on duty at the corner. When they entered the taxi Mr. Davis realized that he had left the ring and wedding license at home and instructed the chauffeur to drive there. They passed the mother on the corner but the machine could travel faster than she, and soon made the trip to Staples street where Mr. Davis secured the necessary ring and license.

The young couple then decided not to wait until later in the day but to get married at once if they could find a minister. After some difficulty they did so.

About ten o'clock Sunday morning Mrs. Davis called up police headquarters and informed Sergeant Hanley who was on the desk that her mother had refused to give up her clothes and asked if an officer could not be sent over to her mother's home where she would meet him. Policeman O'Neill was sent and the mother explained to him that the reason she would not give up her daughter's clothes was because the daughter owed her some board money. The officer advised the daughter that he would be unable to assist her and said she could have recourse through the courts.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Davis are popular young people and it is the sincere hope of their many friends that after such a stormy prelude their marriage life may be calm, peaceful and prosperous.

RED CROSS SEALS SELLING RAPIDLY

The number of Red Cross seals sold is increasing rapidly. Up to Saturday night the returns showed 26,103 seals had been bought. This figure does not include those sold by agents in various parts of the county. If these were added the total would doubtless be over 30,000. These results at this early date are very encouraging to the committee. It leads them to believe that their aim of making this a banner county will be accomplished.

The large number of letters already received enclosing checks for the seals sent out on approval shows that the people of Ulster county are glad to have a convenient opportunity placed before them for contributing toward this great work of fighting tuberculosis. A number of checks were received for amounts greater than one dollar. These ran up as high as ten dollars. In a few instances the stamps were returned with a dollar, the sender stating that he could not use the seals but that he wished to contribute to the cause. Those to whom the letters were mailed realize that these seals are not forced upon them but that they have had placed before them an easy method of fulfilling their desire to assist in the betterment of human health in Ulster county. — 77 are buying these seals purely on account of the joy they feel in helping others. Although they are safeguarding their own health in protecting the lives of others, this idea does not enter the heads of those who give to this great cause.

On Wednesday St. Mary's school about consumption and Red Cross seals. This morning he gave a little talk to the three other parochial schools of this city.

The boat, which was totally destroyed, was owned by Captain Ulster Davis, and the loss is covered by insurance.

Railroad Rush in Ravena.

After a depression of nearly two years the village of Ravena, is now doing more business than has been done there in over eight years. The extra rush of business is particularly noticeable in the railroad yard. Under ordinary conditions the West Shore has used two yard engines, while now it is using six engines, making up trains night and day, and it is impossible to get the yard cleaned out. Big compound engines are pulling eastward trains of loaded cars, which as quickly as possible are switched out and sent southward in new trains.

To Relieve Car Shortage.

Beginning January 1 the Trunk Lines Association will enforce a new rule requiring freight cars filled with merchandise for export to be unloaded within the time limit allowed will be subject to heavy demurrage charges. The rule is necessary on account of the unparalleled congestion in the railroad terminals at New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Norfolk, four of the principal ports on the Atlantic seaboard.

NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART PLANNED

The Philadelphia Public Ledger has sent telegrams to owners of notable art collections in this country asking their opinion on a plan by which collectors would donate their art treasures to a national gallery in some large city, where separate exhibits could be housed in various wings of one large building. The following is the reply received from Charles L. Freer, of Detroit, Mich., owner of one of the finest museums in this country:

To the Editor of Public Ledger: Sir—Answering your inquiry, I already have given my art collection to the National Gallery of Art and intend soon to erect in Washington a suitable building in which to exhibit it permanently. I would like to see additional privately acquired art collections of high quality presented to the National Gallery and exhibited permanently in one large building, or in smaller buildings, as circumstances might require. The buildings should include ample study rooms for the exclusive use of serious students. Every progressive art student would approve of an independent building for the superb Widener treasures, wherever they may be permanently exhibited.

CHARLES L. FREER.
Charles L. Freer, of Detroit, whose telegram to the Public Ledger is printed above, himself possesses one of the finest art collections in America.

Though, as he says he has given his art collection to the National Gallery, the collection is still preserved intact in the Freer home. One of its most famous gems is the so-called peacock dining room, designed by Whistler for Mr. Leyland, of London. Its dominant notes are blue, green and gold, with peacock and peacock feathers forming the framework of the designs. This room was purchased by Mr. Freer for $50,000, while Englishmen of means were debating over saving it for England after Mr. Leyland's death, and it has been built into the Freer residence. It is even more magnificent than it was in the Leyland house, for in the wall cabinets, where Mr. Leyland kept blue and white china, Mr. Freer has placed his peach-blossom-plum-color, brown and green glazes, representing the best periods of Chinese and Japanese art.

Freer also has a Whistler gallery, containing many of Whistler's most celebrated paintings, and in a fireproof gallery, with vaults, he occasionally displays other art treasures. These include scrolls and kakemonos of the finest types produced by China, Japan and Korea. One of the rarest Chinese scrolls in existence belongs to this gallery. It was long an imperial possession and bears the cartouches of the various dynasties, which Oxford scholars are now deciphering in order to prepare a special monograph for Mr. Freer.

ABOUT 300,000 BABIES DIE BEFORE ONE YEAR

The Census Bureau estimates that 300,000 babies died in this country last year before the age of one year, and it is stated that one-half of these deaths were needless if all mothers were strong and infants were breast-fed.

FRYING PAN FIGURES IN SEPARATION SUIT

Also Ownership of Stepladder. Proper way to bring up Children and Husband's Duty to Cook Sunday Dinner.

Judge Chester has denied the motion recently made before him for alimony and counsel fee in the action for separation brought by Hattie R. Hotelling against John E. Hotelling. The plaintiff asked for $150 counsel fee and alimony at the rate of $25 per month. Judge Chester has allowed $35 counsel fee and has denied the motion for alimony but without prejudice to renew at the time the action is tried or determined.

Mrs. Hotelling resides in Sleightsburgh and Mr. Hotelling lives with two of his children in New York City. He is a retired New York policeman and receives a pension of $58.31 per month. He claims that he gave up his job as an active policeman, on which he was receiving $116 per month, at the request of his wife, in 1903, in order to live with her at Sleightsburgh, but she denies that she asked him to quit his place on the force.

Both Knew How to Bring Up Children.

According to the papers on file in the Ulster county clerk's office, the Hotellings were married in the town of Esopus on July 7, 1901, and for a time they lived together in New York City with Mr. Hotelling's four children by a former wife. The first real disagreement between the husband and wife occurred over the husband's children. Two of the children were 12 and 14 years old respectively, and Mrs. Hotelling claims that on different occasions they remained away from home for seven hours and refused to tell her where they were going or where they had been. When she remonstrated with Hotelling about such conduct, she claims he told her it was none of her business. Then she told him unless he tried to control his children or permitted her to do so, she could not stand the worryment and trouble caused by their conduct, whereupon he told her she could go and she must go. She commenced packing up her belongings immediately.

Reminding Her of What He Owed.

The packing process was not without interest. According to Mrs. Hotelling's affidavit, while she was attempting to take her curtains, Hotelling told her that the step-ladder she was using belonged to him. This she disputed because, she said, she had bought it. While the packing was going on, some chops were being cooked in a frying pan. Mrs. Hotelling says the frying pan had belonged to her before her marriage to Hotelling. She kept the pan.

They lived apart until January, 1905, when they again resumed their life together in New York, and this condition continued until January 29, 1911. The children did not live with them. On January 29, 1911, according to Mrs. Hotelling's story, her husband helped her to get ready for church and polished her shoes for her, but when she returned home he had gone away with his clothes.

Mrs. Hotelling's Eye For Clothes.

On several occasions, says Mrs. Hotelling, her husband had asked her if he should leave her whether the sum of $20 per month would be satisfactory to her; she answered it would not. For the first month after he left her he paid her $20, and after that he paid her $15 a month until the following July, when payments stopped. In her affidavit, Mrs. Hotelling alleged that besides his pension of $58.31 per month as a retired policeman, her husband also does other work and lives with his son, whom she alleges has a lucrative position, and two of his daughters. The eldest daughter, she says, is working and the younger daughter dresses handsomely and fashionably.

Mrs. Hotelling seeks a separation on the ground of abandonment and non-support. Hotelling has put in a counterclaim and asks that a separation be granted to him on the ground of cruel treatment. While the children lived with them, he says, Mrs. Hotelling struck and abused them and besides making them do the housework, refused to permit them to study their lessons after school at home.

Wife at Church: Should Husband Cook?

He alleges that on January 29, 1911, the day on which they finally separated, his wife went to church but before going informed him: "Have my dinner ready at 12:30 or else get out." He got out.

Besides alleging that he gave up his job as a New York policeman at $116 at the request of his wife in order to live with her in the town of Esopus, that after their return to New York, while he was working nights, she insisted that he do housework during the day, and that he should care for the rooms of lodgers, which she insisted on keeping against his objection. As a result, he says, he was forced to give up his job. At one time, he says, she struck him on the head with a hammer and "beast," the epithet being preceded by a forceful adjective.

At the time of their marriage, says Hotelling, his wife informed him that she owned stocks and bonds worth $16,000, and that she also owned a house and lot worth $3,500. He believes she still has this property.

Brinlier & Canfield are attorneys for Mrs. Hotelling; Cunningham & Traver are counsel for the husband.

Madalin Man Gets Divorce.

Frederick Miller of Madalin was granted an interlocutory decree in divorce from Emma Miller in the supreme court in Poughkeepsie on Saturday. Thomas Miller, brother of the complainant, was named as co-respondent. No defense was offered, because neither the defendant nor the co-respondent have been located. The Millers had been married about five years. Mrs. Miller came from Germany.

Woman Worsts Annoyer.

F. J. Speer of Gage street reports that as he was going home on Saturday evening a woman was walking down the Ulster & Delaware tracks and he saw a man run after her and take hold of her arm. "Say, do you know me?" he asked. "Yes," she replied, "and I do not want anything to do with you." Her reply enraged the man, who is said to have struck her in the right side. She staggered back on the tracks and Mr. Speer was about to go to her assistance, when with her right hand she delivered the man such a severe blow that he went down.

Mystery in Death of Two.

Physicians at Monticello have failed to determine the cause of the sudden death of Earl and Myron Osterhout, 4 and 6 year old sons of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Osterhout of Neversink. The children died on the same day after ten days' illness, and whether from slow poisoning, wild fruit eaten in the woods, or ptomaine is still a mystery.

Steel Orders Turned Away.

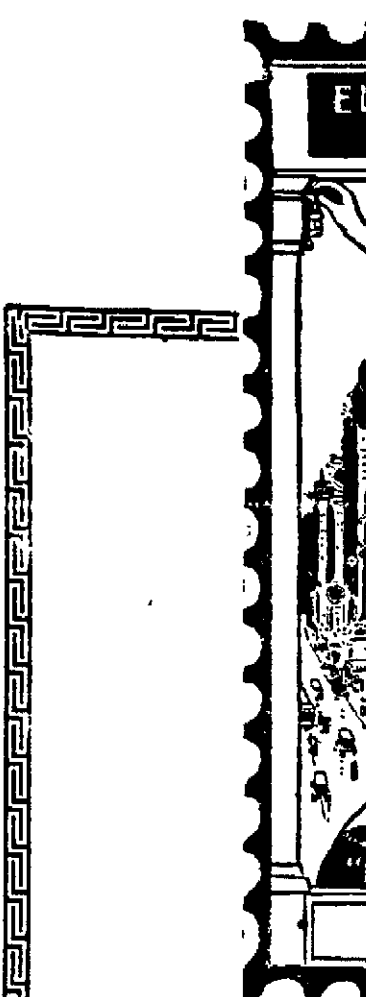

More orders for rolled and forged steel were turned away last week than were accepted by the steel mills. Even at that the volume of new business accepted was in excess of mill capacity, indicating that present plant congestion will be further extended. Domestic manufacturers of machinery were especially urgent for steel to cover contracts.

Electricity Has Brightened the Home

Ever since the birth of the Electric Light and its introduction into the home, there has been an increasing appreciation of the service this wonderful servant is doing for mankind.

1,000 per cent more Electric Light (Candle Power Units) can be had today than could be had for the same amount of money 20 years ago.

And just think, during these same 20 years, the cost of living—of food products and other necessities of life have practically doubled in cost!

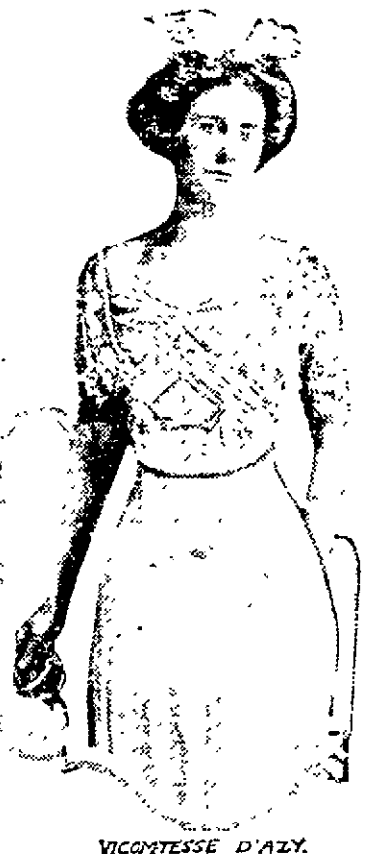

How timely, then, is the National Celebration centered about Electricity—very fittingly called in which the people are urged to show their approbation and approval by learning more about electricity—its power for good—by increasing its application in the home and business.

KINGSTON, N. Y., NOV. 29, 1915.

A communication received by the Board of Education from James F. Sullivan, chief of the law division of the State Education Department, praises Kingston for its public school attendance record and commends it for its enforcement of the law against truancy and inexcusable absenteeism. The percentage of attendance to enrollment is about 95, Kingston having one of the highest percentages in the State. The showing of the parochial schools is believed to be equally favorable. Kingston for years has occupied a high position with respect to school attendance. Though in 1910, as now, it had less population than either Poughkeepsie or Newburgh, the number of persons between 6 and 20 years attending school in Kingston was the larger. Figures of the United States Census Bureau show that in that year there were 7,180 persons of school age in Kingston, 7,370 in Newburgh and 6,641 in Poughkeepsie, while the attendance was 4,292, 4,274 and 3,794 respectively. In all the age groups Kingston led its sister cities, notably so in the years 15 to 17, when the larger number of children leave school to go to work. For this group the figure in Kingston was 615, in Newburgh, 540, and Poughkeepsie, 520. The figures are significant of the emphasis which Kingston places on education, of the appreciation of educational advantages by the people of all classes, and of the enforcement of the law in such cases as are necessary to ensure the child a good schooling to equip him or her for life's duties and responsibilities.

In ruling that the child welfare board of a county may not grant a widow a pension for children not her own, unless she adopts them legally, Attorney General Woodbury has closed the gate to possible fraud in the operation of the law which has for its object the care of the child in home. It is held that the protection of his or her future. A class of women, with the idea of taking advantage of the statutory provision for mothers' pensions, might endeavor to make a business of obtaining possession of children, for varying periods but not permanently, for the money they might be able to secure from child welfare boards. The children under such circumstances, it may be readily believed, would not receive the care they should have. As the law has been interpreted, a woman who adopts a child, in her effort properly to care for him or her, finds herself in need of aid, may be given aid, the same as a needy woman left a widow with children. A woman to whom a child is not bound by natural or legal ties cannot be expected to take the interest in the child's wellbeing and future that his or her mother or foster-mother would take. "Child welfare" means much more than providing the child with food, clothing and shelter. It means sympathetic interest, moral and spiritual instruction, and the development of the child's capacities in the best manner possible.

When the Republicans resumed control of the State Government in Albany last January, after four years of Tammany administration, they found on hand the smallest amount of cash in any year in the State's history. To add to their perplexity, revenues fell off during the early months of the year, and it was necessary to defer payment of some of the larger obligations. The fiscal year ended September 30 last with a deficit of almost $2,000,000. The efforts of the Republican administration are being directed toward restoring the State to its former good financial condition. Heavy trading in stocks, on which a tax has to be paid, have increased revenue from the tax on secured debts and additional revenue from the new liquor license tax, together with a direct levy on real and personal property, combine to place State finances on a sound basis, wiping out the effects of the period of extravagant expenditures between the Hughes and Whitman administrations. The State now will meet its obligations promptly and will not be embarrassed in taking care of additional needs as they may arise.

A company representing the Brooklyn Rapid Transit and the New York Railways, to which the City of New York gave the privilege of operating cars over the Williamsburg bridge, has earned an average of 100 per cent annually in the last six years on a capital of $100,000. Bridge Commissioner Kracke reports. Now that the contract has expired, Father Knickerbocker has the intention to suggest that the concession be revalued, so he can participate in the profits, but the Brooklyn and Manhattan companies say "no." They threaten, in case the city attempts to force the matter, to withdraw through service across the bridge, so that there will be little profit for any of them. The spirit they exhibit is often in evidence in connection with the transit situation in the greater city. While public service corporations generally are showing an increasing spirit of fairness in their relations with municipalities and the public, the transit concerns in the metropolis still seem to think that they own the streets and bridges over which they operate. The reorganization of the Public Service Commission of the First District into an energetic and effective body which will co-operate with New York city in its transit affairs and hold the corporations to a strict accountability has become an urgent necessity.

TEN AND TWENTY YEARS AGO.

November 28, 1905.—A large number of towns, corporations and individuals were represented at a hearing held by the State Water Commission to record objections to the city of New York's water supply plans. Commissioner Schleicher said: "New York needs the water. If it provides adequate compensation, will you be satisfied?" Judge Clearwater replied: "We don't want New York here at all." S. D. Coykendall presented a lengthy argument, in which he said 23 months might elapse before property taken was paid for.

James S. Jones of East Durham, and called on several old acquaintances, says the Catskill Examiner. While in a chat with Mr. Jones, he informed us that during the civil war he was a member of Company K of the 12th Regiment and served three years at the front. His company consisted of young men who enlisted in the towns of Greenville, Durham and Windham, and when the regiment left Kingston for the seat of war on August 22, 1862, it consisted of 998 Greene and Ulster county men. After several disastrous engagements the regiment numbered only 70 and at this time the 71st and 72d regiments of New York city were consolidated with a 120th, which gave them a quota of 460 men. At the present time there are only four members of this company left. They are Mr. Jones, Isaac Hayward, Cairo, Ira Reynolds, Windham, and James H. Everett, Kingston.

At the present time there are only four members of this company left. They are Mr. Jones, Isaac Hayward, Cairo, Ira Reynolds, Windham, and James H. Everett, Kingston.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

Seeing a police officer standing out on the sidewalk, little Marjorie said: "Mamma, there's a policeman waiting for somebody to be bad."—Boston Transcript.

"Madam, your husband says we can count on him for his support." "Well, that's more than I can do. The lazy, good-for-nothing thing!"—Buffalo Express.

Applicant—"I've got a head full of ideas, sir, that would come in handy in the management of your business. Boss (to nearby clerk)—"Hire, Jack, take this chap down to the unloading department."—Judge.

"What are you going to say when you address Congress?" asked the friend. "I don't know yet," replied Senator Sorglum. "After the opposition I have met with out home I don't feel called on to make long speeches. I'm lucky to be able to say 'Present!'"—Washington Star.

Mightier Than the Sword.

A tramp approached a certain Downs home the other morning, rapped on the back door and when the lady of the house appeared he began to clear his throat preparatory to telling his handiwork story. "Get away from here," said the woman. "I never feed professional bums." But, madam, I am not a professional bum," said the tramp. "I am a psychologist traveling in the interest of science. I read characters at a glance. In looking into the soulful depths of your beautiful eyes, I read there that you are by nature a kind-hearted, gentle, generous woman. It is these noble impulses and the contemplation of charitable deeds that keeps you looking so young and handsome." "You poor, tired, hungry man," said the woman. "Come inside and I will give you some breakfast." Moral—Diplomacy is mightier than the sword.—Downs (Kan.) Times.

Liked Excitement.

Mountain lonesomeness, which overawes sojourners from the outside world, may even have a diverting influence upon the spirits of the confirmed mountaineer.

Recently a traveler in the Cumberland while climbing the rugged trail in search of something to relieve the monotonous mountain life chanced upon a native who lounged upon a stump in seeming unconsciousness of the solitude.

"I see you are admiring the mountain scenery," remarked the traveler. "Which?" yawned the native. "Rather quiet?" suggested the traveler.

"No, there is a dinged calamity yonder," replied the native with considerable animation.

In response to a hint from the native the traveler listened long and patiently, being rewarded at last by hearing the faint cry of some wild animal far across the mountain inslences. With the air of a man who was proud of having a statement verified the native resumed whistling a tune which had been interrupted.

"Even been to New York?" asked the traveler after an interval.

"Yep," nodded the native with a squirt of tobacco juice.

"Like it," persisted the traveler.

"Nope"—more tobacco juice.

"Why not?" queried the traveler.

"Too dinged lonesome thur," yawned the native. "Made me homesick."—New York Press.

A Pardonable Mistake.

Hotel Proprietor—What is that crowd outside looking at?

Clerk (after brief inspection)—Well, I swan! That jay in number 500 has twisted around his gas jet and poled it out the window with the flame burning.

Proprietor—Front! Take a pair of shears to number 500, get that card which says:

"Don't blow out the gas, Turn it out."

And cut off that last line.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Mr. Roosa told him if he would give him the money he would let him go. He said the money was home; so the lad, Mr. Roosa and Constable Geary went to the boy's house. The lad went in and got the box of cigarettes and gave it to Mr. Geary then went to get the money. He did not come back and Mr. Roosa and Geary began to get on the job of finding the lad when he was seen running in another direction. Geary and Roosa made for him but the lad was too much for them. Miss Mabel Turner, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and James W. Turner, brother of the bride, was best man. The house was prettily decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums and yellow roses. Covers were laid for eleven, and a sumptuous and toothsome repast was served at six o'clock. After a pleasant evening the guests left for their homes, leaving their host and hostess very fine remembrances and votes of a jolly good time. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. John W. Lent, Caleb D. Camp Fire Luncheon.

Miss Ethel Van Gaasbeek entertained her Camp Fire Girls on Thanksgiving eve in a most unique manner. The usual camp fire musical program was followed and in addition the latest selections from the popular New York plays were rendered in a most creditable manner. The table decorations were unusual, being planned by T. H. Heard, uncle of Miss Van Gaasbeek, formerly of this city but now interested in the New York Art League. He utilized specimens of birds and butterflies from his collection gathered from all over the world. The birds formed the centerpiece on the table, the butterflies hanging pendant from the chandelier which was entwined with bittersweet and selected greens. On the table was a rare collection of Indian bead work, including beaded moccasins, headpieces, belts, wampum and birch bark canoes, all from Mr. Heard's collection. The refreshments included California pomegranates, persimmons, grapes, etc. There was a special souvenir booklet made by Mr. Heard from birch bark, filled with Camp Fire Girls pictures and rare Indian subjects gathered by him on his numerous trips among the Indians, the cover being embellished with each girl's particular colored ribbon. An appropriate symbol, made purposely to accord with each of the girl's special attainments, was on the back of each booklet and was presented as a little reminder of the pleasant occasion.

FRANKIE RUSSELL

TRYING TO FORCE MANDOT INTO FIGHT.

New Orleans, Nov. 29.—Remy Door, the New Orleans fight manager, who is piloting the destinies of "Pete" Herman, the banam-weight, and Frankie Russell, the lightweight, is real peeved. The cause of Door's peevishness is that he thinks Joe Mandot, the lightweight who also hails from that city, is sidestepping a bout with Russell.

According to Door, Mandot promised to fight Russell if the latter would defeat Rocky Kansas of Buffalo. Russell went out and won a decision over Kansas, but Mandot then went back on his promise to fight Russell, saying that the latter was not in his class.

Door alleges that while promoters have offered Mandot $1,500 for a match with Russell, Mandot will not sign up for the bout, but takes on Ted Lewis and other fellows who hand him a fine lacing for $1,000 to $1,200.

Mandot is figuring on getting a bout with Freddie Welsh and can't see Russell, and Door says that Mandot is afraid to jeopardize his chances for a Welsh bout by taking a lacing from Russell.

Wealth Buys No Immunity. "Even millionaires suffer like the rest of us." "What's on your mind now?" "I just overheard old Newrick get a fine bawling out from a traffic policeman."

SINCERITY.

If the show of anything be good for anything I am sure sincerity is better, for why does any man dissemble or seem to be that which he is not but because he thinks it giveth to him such a quality of excellence as he pretends to? The very best way in the world for a man to seem to be anything is really to be what he tries to seem to be. —Tillotson.

Human Ignorance.

Speaking of his life, the aged scientist, Fabre, said shortly before his death: "Because I have stirred a few grains of sand in the darkness and I am a little bit of light in the darkness of the world, I feel that I have a duty to perform. Human knowledge will be enriched from the lives of the world before we possess the last word that the great has to say to us. Scientifically, nature is a book without a definite solution to man's curiosity. Hypothesis of the hypothesis, the theoretical public heap accumulates and truth ever eludes us. To know how not to know might well be the last words of wisdom."

WHY DRY CLEANING

Life of Lace Curtains is Shortened When They Are Washed and Stretched.

Dry cleaning is not dry at all. It is simply a cleaning process where water is not used. When lace curtains, for instance, are sent to the professional cleaner, he washes them in a bath of gasoline to which has been added a gasoline soluble soap. The latter, when added to gasoline, removes all the dirt from the curtains just as ordinary soap in water would do.

Lace curtains when dry cleaned do not require difficult and tedious ironing or pressing or stretching upon frames, which is necessary when washed with soap and water. For this reason the life of lace curtains is very materially prolonged when they are dry cleaned.

We send your Curtains away to be cleaned.

is so large and so varied that it would be vain to attempt to describe to you in detail. But we certainly want you to know that the excellent showing will meet with your enthusiastic approval. Moreover, we desire to assure you that our prices mean to you a general average saving of about 25 per cent. Do drop in and see the line. You will see almost every style of Lace Curtain made at prices from 50 cents to $25.00.

Nothing adds greater charm to the home than appropriate curtains and draperies. The new madras ready-made curtains and materials by the yard will satisfy and give the home that cheery, comfy atmosphere.

MAYOR DISCUSSES
CIVIC PROBLEMS

Mr. Canfield Tells of Duties and Responsibilities of Officials and Citizens—Refers to Progress in Municipal Administration.

Speaking before the Men's Association of the Fair Street Reformed Church on Friday night, Mayor Palmer Canfield gave a very interesting and comprehensive resume of municipal responsibilities and problems and the duties of citizens. The remarkable awakening in civic affairs in recent years was referred to by the mayor, who made an earnest plea for enlightened city management to meet the growing problems. The mayor said in part:

In bringing a message from the city and from our city it is difficult to decide just what to say. It is not difficult, however, because the field of thought in that direction is limited, but because it is so extensive and comprehensive. I will attempt to speak from the standpoint of one "within the city," and when I say "within the city," I say it advisedly. We are all within the city in a physical and livable sense, but we are not all mentally within the city when we come to analyze it. Those who see it from the inside are those who have changed their general knowledge of the city to an intimate knowledge by contact with its actual conditions and its present and possible future services, and by struggling to grasp its possibilities. In speaking from within the city I must admit that I do not speak from the central point, because I have not as yet reached that point.

In the first place the city is one of the greatest possibilities of all the agencies of civilization. It multiplies the means of education, enjoyment, progress and achievement. Its aim should be to lift up its citizens, mentally, morally and socially. When socialization and humanization are brought to their greatest possible heights, I believe that civilization will have nearly attained its highest mark.

In reflecting upon the political aspect of the city, we must all clearly see that the word "political" is usually given a wrong meaning and labeled in an erroneous sense. Politics is often considered and spoken of in the sense of being the business of preying upon government and society. Politics, however, is its proper and correct sense, is an art which is constructive rather than destructive of proper government. It is the science of the regulation of man in all his governmental relations. This being so, then it follows that the politician is one who applies the science of politics. Every office-holder who is doing his duty is, therefore, a politician, because he is assisting in the application of the science of politics and government. If he is not performing his duty in a proper way, then he is not a politician, because he is not helping in the practice of obtaining the ends of civil authority. I realize that this is just the opposite and contrary of the usual and accepted view of the meaning of a politician. I believe, however, that it is the more correct interpretation of politics. I further believe, that such construction should be more prevalent and that then a better tone would be given to politics.

The so-called political leader will always be with us under our present constitutional form of government. He is a politician, however, only when he assists in the selection of candidates who will perform their respective administrative functions in a proper manner. When he attempts to urge the voters to choose one who will not probably apply the science of government in a proper or efficient manner, he ceases to be a politician, because he is not attempting to properly regulate mankind in his relations as a member of government. If he asks the voters to endorse a negative candidate or administration, his political thermometer will probably fall to zero. The wiser the leader, the greater will be his understanding of the responsibility resting upon him. It is true that in a city like the city of New York a leader is not so apt to be stripped of his power by reason of lack of political ideals, because it is so strongly partisan. In a place like that, it sometimes requires grave causes to bring about a political volcanic eruption. Similar conditions do not exist in our city. To be acceptable here, one must be responsive to the advanced note in municipal politics which calls for the increase of its constructive activities and the enlargement of its services, and such a person is a politician in its better and proper meaning.

The past dozen years have witnessed a remarkable awakening in city administration and in city life. The growth of our city has been gradual, and, therefore, we have not undergone a complete transformation in our physical make-up. However, we have caught the new spirit, the spirit of better social arrangements, the spirit of cleanliness, beauty and health, the spirit of a more general interest in the welfare of the city and its inhabitants. There is less apathy and inertia. There is more earnest civic work being done by our citizens at the present time than ever before. Civic betterment has been given real life. City problems are not studied with the idea of enriching "someone at the expense of the public, but from the view-point of effective results.

It is well that the American cities, and especially the larger cities, have caught the modern spirit and the progressive stride. Not so long ago our cities were practically at a standstill while the cities of Germany and England, and particularly of Germany, were forging ahead with a spirit of hopefulness, efficiency and success. In our cities some particular persons or civic organization would become stimulated to take up some particular local conditions that had become intolerable, and would give it publicity and succeed in having it remedied. It was only when the pendulum reached the extreme limit of failure, however, that it was swung to the very opposite point of success. No general or systematic plan of progress was evolved. When one city adopted an advanced piece of its departments it would be noticed by other cities. Gradually a comparison of results was made, and each city would benefit to some degree by the special work in certain departments in the other cities. However, the non-success came from the fact that there was no general planning. There was no study made of conditions with the end in view of accomplishing things in the best possible manner. It was only when conditions became bad or intolerable that anything was said or anything was done. Just so long as conditions could be labeled fair or medium no brain cells were exhausted to improve them. It was forgotten that all are taught in school that the word "better" follows the word "good" and that the word "best" follows the word "better." The words better and best were not always kept in view. It is difficult to reach the best or ideal conditions, but it is usually possible to arrive at better conditions. The word "better" should be the head-light of all cities, and the word "plan" should be the driving wheel.

As I have stated, it is well that American cities have caught their stride. It is my opinion that if they had not caught the right spirit and held it prior to the commencement of the present great war, that at least ten years would have elapsed before they would have grasped it. The absence of any great war for a period of nearly fifty years, although a negative cause, has been the greatest cause for the existence of the modern city. When a great destructive war is being waged, municipal constructive methods are not being employed. The energy and the capacity and the skill and the genius and the wealth of the nations engaged in the present war is being used and consumed in the destruction of life and property. No new roads and bridges are being built in those countries unless for military purposes. No new factories are being built except for war purposes. Practically no new homes are being built, but many are being destroyed. There is no time for municipal planning except to conserve and preserve the food supplies. The American cities borrowed city planning from European cities. American cities have received a severe blow because of this war. However, it is not a fatal blow because city planning in this country has reached its growth and it is not now entirely dependent upon the activities in that direction in European cities. Next to the prevalence of peace, the great inventions of recent years, and especially of public utilities, and the wonderful discoveries, have probably been the greatest cause for the change in the cities. The use of electrical power for light and heat and power, the telephone, the trolley car, and the automobile and other things have brought pleasure and comfort to the people and incidentally have been a great unifying force. The wonderful biological and other discoveries that have been made have materially reduced the prevalence of many diseases, and have made the work of the health authorities more effective and have increased the health and happiness of the people.

All these things together with the trend of the times have pushed the great majority of the citizens on the road of co-operation.

Morchants engaged in similar classes of business work together and pull together for the good of the community. They are friends of the city. It is the "get-together" spirit. It is the co-operative spirit. It is the successful spirit. When that spirit really exists in a city then the burgeoning of fear hides itself and hope becomes the star of success of that city.

All these things, however, have not eliminated the problems of the city. On the contrary, they have increased its problems. What we want, what we need, what we must have, is enlightened city management to solve these ever-growing and ever-pressing problems. We must not keep useful governmental progress in subjection, but we must build with a vision. The wide-awake city offers cultural opportunities to its citizens. It furnishes recreational opportunities. It shares the responsibility of steering the activities of the young with the home, schools and churches by providing aids to right living, and thereby assists in the building up of a higher type of citizenship, which is the one great work to be done by all.

"I Have Such a Lovely Bargain"

Women like to compare notes and when one gets a "lovely bargain" she naturally exults.

Women are trained buyers. They take delight in shopping. They do not all seek "cut prices" or great reductions but they do want a full money's worth.

Women are natural newspaper readers and they choose leaders of newspaper advertising.

They find it both pleasant and profitable.

It is almost as much fun shopping round through the newspaper columns as it is visiting the stores.

And the newspaper shopping can be done at one's own fireside.

GLASCO.

Glasco, Nov. 29.—There were two weddings among the Italian residents on Sunday morning. Miss Fanny Fanderio was united to Frank Mannino and Miss Rosie Altomar became the bride of Mr. Sallo of California. A large party of guests were entertained at the home of each of the brides after the ceremony.

Elwood Molius, who was painfully injured by a fall a couple of weeks ago, is still confined to his room. Dr. Gifford calls occasionally and the patient is on the road to wellville through the faithful nursing and care of his mother.

Archer Low has treated himself to a brand new up to date motorcycle that for power and speed is unequalled, being able to carry two persons eighty miles an hour.

On Saturday of the present week the steamer Gardner will discontinue her trips between Glasco and Rondout for the season of 1915.

The Fame of Newburyport.

I asked the old negro porter at the inn at Newburyport what the town was principally noted for, and he answered its purity and the landing here of the Siamese twins. He added that they were both dead, and I do not know whether he referred to the two attractions, purity and the Siamese, or simply to the twins.

I was shocked that he did not speak of Washington and Lafayette, who had slept in a neighboring mansion, but notables who were not freakish by nature he held in small esteem. Even the hotel clerk was rather blasé about these distinguished guests, opining that the two gentlemen, if one could judge by tablets all over the country, slept more than any other men in history—Louise Clouser Hale in Century Magazine.

Not What He Expected.

This story is told by an English naval officer who witnessed the occurrence at Manila: "As I was crossing one of the numerous bridges across the Pasig river I saw a native Filipino split in the face of a Spanish officer and then run for protection to the American sentinel, who was pacing the bridge. It was some time before the Filipino could make himself understood. When the sentry comprehended his action he was very prompt indeed. He handed his gun to the Spanish officer, caught the native by the nape of his neck and the seat of his trousers and pitched him off the bridge into the Pasig river. Then he calmly took his gun from the officer and began pacing his beat as if nothing had happened."

GETS REVENGE FOR DEFEAT ON FRIDAY

Brooklyn Basketball Team Wins From Kingston on Saturday Night—Two Players Pay Fines For Arguments.

Defeating Kingston by the score of 25 points to 21 at the local armory Saturday night, Brooklyn's basketball players got revenge for the defeat of Friday night on their home court. It was the first time this season that Kingston suffered defeat on their home court. Brooklyn showed real form and made full amends for the defeat of Friday night.

The court was not in the best condition on account of raining before the game, but as the southern teams are more accustomed to slippery floors, Brooklyn scored more points than Kingston, the visitors giving an unusual lively exhibition of fast dribbling and dodging, in which respect Morganwick's players were slow.

For the better part of the game Brooklyn was in the lead, holding their own in good style and, as a matter of fact, assumed the lead by the fast playing of young Simberg, who was too fast for Struesand, who played forward in place of Waenter. The Brooklyn guard, only a high school boy and should develop into a star player. Brooklyn had many supporters at the game who were glad to see them on the winner's end.

Before the contest was started, Referee O'Toole collected five dollar fines from Ruckert and Johnson for a little argument they had in Brooklyn. It looked as though he would have to fine Ruckert again as the Brooklyn player and Tom were getting set for a little tussle, under the Brooklyn basket in the last half. They were however separated before O'Toole could see them in their fighting pose.

Patterson Defeats Stamford.
Patterson outplayed the Stamford team in their Interstate Basketball League game at the Fifth Regiment armory Saturday night at Patterson, by a score of 30 to 18.

The local team, led by Captain Smith of the visitors was put out of the game by Referee Sandy Shields for using profane language. There was only three minutes left to play at this point.

ELLENVILLE.

Ellenville, Nov. 29.—Thanksgiving was observed as usual in our peaceful hamlet, with the usual number of family reunions, out of town guests, concerts and dances. Union services were held in the M. The lecture given by Rev. E. E. Count on Monday evening, under the auspices of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, was well attended. The illustrations depicting life in Bulgaria, and scenes during the Balkan war, were well worth seeing, and the description of life in that country well worth hearing. Truly, it should have been heard by all.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, Nov. 29.—Michigan's clip-bop from glory in the football world is attributed by many to the severe student requirements that prevail in Yost's institution.

The entrance exams, it is said, are very hard. None but "slark" students are able to pass them in a way that is satisfactory to those who guard the entrance gates of the university. That keeps out many ordinary students, and, of course, it keeps out many good football players.

When in school the students must maintain a very high average in his studies. That requires him to burn the midnight electricity and unless a student is able to learn quickly it seems that he has no time for football.

In Michigan this season there were at least 100 youths who would have been wonders on the gridiron, but they did not go out and try for the team simply because they knew it would put them back in their studies, which would mean that the faculty at once would bar them from gridiron competition.

Isn't it an odd place, that U. of Mich., where they give book studies the preference over football glory?

Michigan's 15 Year Record.

The greatest team that Michigan ever had was that 1901 combination which scored 550 points in 11 games—an average of 50 points per game—which won all its battles and which wasn't scored upon.

The best Michigan's scoring machine, however, was the 1905 outfit which rolled up a total of 61 points in 11 games, an average of nearly 5.5 points per game. That team did not lose any of its games and only 12 points were scored against it during the season.

Here is a little table that tells of the glory of Michigan in those "point-a-minute" years and also it shows the gradual decline:

1902	544	12	11	0	0
1903	565	6	11	0	1
1904	567	22	10	0	0
1905	495	2	12	1	0
1906	72	30	4	1	0
1907	85	6	4	1	0
1908	128	81	5	2	1
1909	116	34	6	1	0
1910	29	9	3	0	3
1911	90	38	5	1	2
1912	159	65	5	2	0
1913	175	21	6	1	0
1914	233	68	6	3	0
1915	109	81	4	3	1
Total	4,008	475	103	16	8

Those who still are trying to figure out how Yale beat Princeton need only to look at the summary of that game which shows that Princeton was penalized something like 100 yards and made eight fumbles. The experting persons figure that the tumble of a punt and the recovery by the opposition is equivalent to a loss of 60 yards by the fumbling side.

Therefore, Princeton by fumbling eight punts, five of which were gathered in by Yale, lost 300 yards in that way and another 100 yards through penalties. That totals 400 yards, and means that Princeton "spotted" Yale something like four goal-to-goal touchdowns.

Is it any wonder Princeton lost?
